

Chen-Hsiu Huang (Chris)
chenhsiu@cmlab.csie.ntu.edu.tw

Day of Presentation

I slept very little last night because I have to present a paper this morning. In our laboratory we usually have a meeting all day on Thursday. I decided to present this paper of my own will two weeks ago.

My laboratory in our department is quite large. Each time we have meeting, a student will be assigned to present a paper or something he/she has done recently. Because of many students, it takes a long time to go through a round and last time my presentation was about five months ago.

I spent more than a week's effort to make the presentation slide, which is sixty-five pages long and probably the longest slide I have made.

The presentation on this morning went smoothly. It took me about one and a half hour to finish and I think I illustrated it well enough to let other student understand what's talking about in this paper.

I was nervous before this presentation because last time when it's my turn, I did not do it well and I could feel that my professor was a little disappointed because he though I can do it much better than what was presented.

Now since it's finished and I also feel very tired. After finishing today's journal, I'll go to bed early to take a good rest tonight.

Thu Apr 17 22:13:27 CST 2003